Data Notes:

1. Data on the number of OoP requested are only tracked in family and IDV courts. Similar data is not available for OoP issued in Supreme Civil Court.
2. Final OoP may have not been issued during which the the original petition (request) for the order was filed.
3. The number of orders of protection requested may be smaller than the number of all orders issued (i.e., temporary plus final) because the requests are a count of people that filed a petition (request) for an order of protection. The judge often issues more than one temporary order of protection based on an original petition, so that a series of separate orders might be generated from one request.
